

A black cat leads the wedding procession of Lloyd George's son. The ceremony was one of the biggest social affairs of England during the past few months. The bride was Miss Edna Jones and the groom Gwily Lloyd George.
© Underwood & Underwood.

John Barrymore, American actor, and wife sail for France. Mrs. Barrymore, a writer, uses the pen name of "Michael Strange," and her last work was "Claire de Lune," in which her husband and his sister, Ethel Barrymore, played the leading roles.
Wide World Photo.

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former head of Cornell University, who has been appointed United States minister to China. Photo snapped at the White House.
© Harris & Ewing.

Clarence G. Smithers, United States marshal for the eastern district of Virginia, destroying confiscated liquor in Alexandria. The bottles were emptied, one at a time, into a sewer.
National Photo Co.

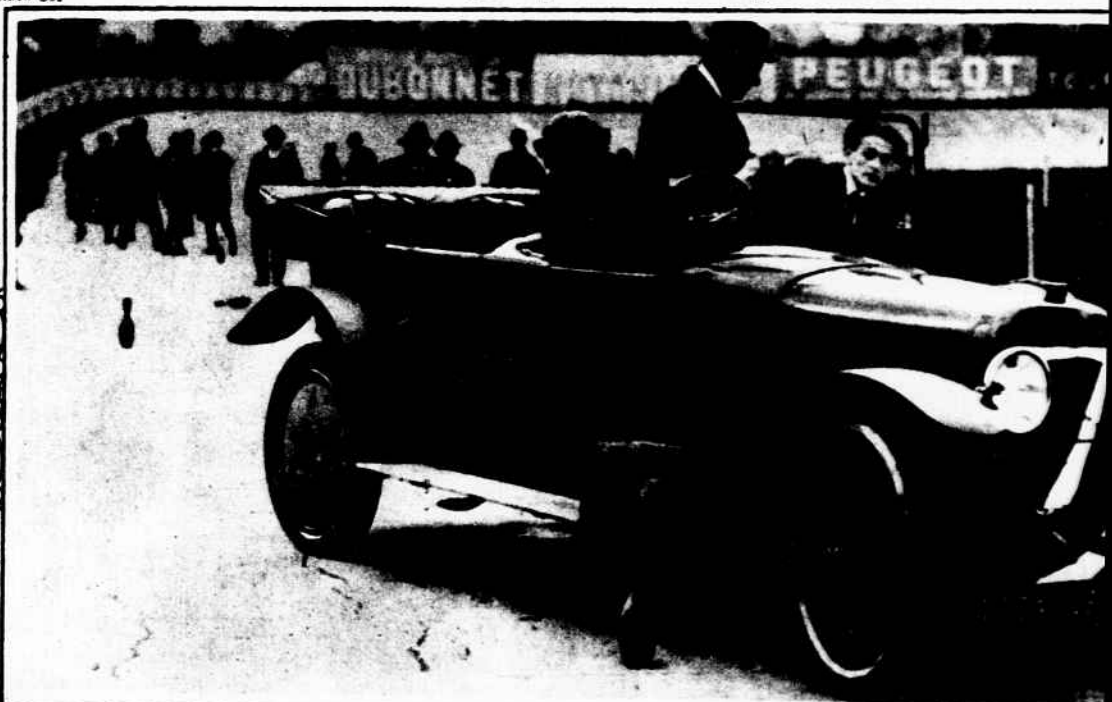

One of the features of an English pageant held at King's College, Strand, illustrating Children's League Homes at Ottershaw.

Miss Helen Löffler, one of the Marjorie Webster dancers, who is rapidly gaining popularity in local theatricals.
Photo by Rice.

At the opening of the summer season at Newport, R. I. Mrs. Andrew M. Morland, well known society woman of Pittsburgh and New York, arriving at her summer home along the seashore.
Keystone View Co.

Think you can do it? Motorists of Paris have invented a new game to test driving between bowling pins set up just far enough apart to allow clearance for the car. The fewest number of pins of a trip around the track wins the contest.

Edward J. Mahan (left) and Bentley J. Mulford, Washington delegates to the Rainbow Division convention in Cleveland.
Photos by Bachrach.

